The user VM is installed with VMware Fusion on the laptop, they can access the remote Xenserver hosted VM via internet. The role of the molecular chaperone HSP90 in ZAP-70 signaling in human T cells. The molecular chaperone HSP90 is an essential cellular protein that plays a key role in protein stability, signal transduction, and survival pathways. Although HSP90 and its co-chaperones are known to be important for signal transduction in other cell types, a mechanistic role for HSP90 in T cells has not been addressed. In this study, we demonstrate that HSP90 is associated with ZAP-70 in human T cells and show that HSP90 is required for optimal ZAP-70 signaling in the activation of the T cell receptor (TCR). Knockdown of HSP90 by RNA interference in Jurkat T cells results in impaired TCR-induced phosphorylation of ZAP-70, calcium mobilization, and phosphorylation of extracellular signal-regulated kinase (ERK). Furthermore, this phenotype can be restored by the overexpression of ZAP-70 mutants that retain the ability to bind to HSP90. Our results suggest a novel role for HSP90 in the activation of T cell signaling. The serum level of C3 is a predictive factor for long-term renal survival in IgA nephropathy patients. Tubulointerstitial injury is a common histopathological finding in IgA nephropathy (IgAN). We analyzed the association between the serum levels of complement components, i.e., C3, C4, and CH50, and the long-term renal survival of IgAN patients. We enrolled 274 patients (161 men and 113 women; median follow-up period, 74 months). During the follow-up period, 39 patients (13.9%) died and 64 (22.8%) progressed to end-stage renal disease (ESRD). End-stage renal disease (ESRD) occurred 82138339de
