He is a member of the Missouri House of Representatives for the 22nd district in St. Louis County, Missouri, covering the part of Chesterfield. He is a member of the Democratic Party. Personal Hard was born in St. Louis, Missouri, and attended Washington University in St. Louis, earning his law degree. He is married to Rebecca Hard, a former member of the St. Louis Board of Aldermen. Hard and his wife run the Hard Law Firm, which he started with his father and brothers. The firm has won several awards for its legal work. Political career Hard was elected to the St. Louis County Council in November 2008 and was re-elected in 2012. In 2015, he was elected as a county assessor. In 2017, he ran for the Missouri House of Representatives to succeed Democrat John F. Affleck, who had to resign in March of that year to accept an appointment from Governor Eric Greitens to the Missouri Court of Appeals. Hard defeated former St. Louis city council member Candace K. Kemp in the Democratic primary and Representative Glen Moore, Jr. (D-University City) in the general election. In the general election, Hard raised more money than any other House candidate, $4,571,844 to Moore's $430,680 and Kemp's $162,468. Hard previously served on the Chesterfield City Council, but when he ran for the Missouri House of Representatives, the election district he would represent shifted from Chesterfield to the 22nd District.
