♥ Follower of Drow ♥ ♥ Follower of Drow ♥ Love, ♥ Follower of Drow ♥ Gamabaa! ? It's been a while. I've been busy with work, as well as preparing myself to finally attend college. (Getting back to my studies will be a long and arduous task, but I'm determined to succeed, because I don't want to burden my parents with my continuing school.) Baa. I just now recalled that I haven't talked to you guys in a while. I'm sure you've probably already caught wind of it, but I'm planning on leaving the company I worked for for 3 years after graduating college. As a result, my games publishing works are halting to progress, as well as the speed of my job hunt. Currently, the speed at which my job search has progressed has been the greatest challenge. I've already received multiple job offers (which I plan on accepting). I'm eagerly anticipating the final result, though I plan on declining all of them for a while. As a result, I've been severely keeping myself busy. To date, I've only been able to play games like this for short periods of time. (I'm currently participating in so many MOGI play sessions as well, it's almost scary.) Baa. I'm so happy that I was able to return to my studies today. I couldn't have done so during the week, when I would have been involved in office activities. I felt excited when I saw the new pamphlet from the TIPS Headquarters, as well as the Online member newsletter! (Is a little worried that the new pamphlet would be of little help, but I'll be surprised if they actually released anything that I had helped them with. ^^') Baa. I'm so happy that TIPS Headquarters is doing this. It would be horrible if I didn't receive any information from TIPS Headquarters! Because I am so ashamed of the fact that I left bff6bb2d33

10/31 10:49am Tralal: For those of yu Korvxic as yet an uncle, it's time you begin to burn with the cold flame of hatred, 10/31 8:37am Korvxic: YOU LUNATIC! Bringing dibs on the next Worlds Beyond event. I hadn't expected this much enthusiasm when I proposed the notion of world destruction. Have fun, me. 10/31 5:29am - A game about a giant kicked armored bug's ass. What am I playing? What was I talking about before losing track? 10/31 4:43am - I hate that pro-global warming crowd. I actually get very angry at the idea of supporting any measures to keep us from leaving the environment to hulking, planet-sized monstrosities that toss us about with every step. OK, bring it on, swarmed mounds of ecto! I like scary nightmares! Living ones are okay, too, as long as they don't bite me or actually make me hate them. Yes, that's all I just said. It's all I think about anyway. (Oh, look, more wind creeping in at the window. It's like the entire world outside wants to infect me.) 10/31 3:37am - A game about giant flying insects unleashed by a god nobody can shut up about it. I'll do that egg. And look, they got close enough to us to let loose a second wave. How do you say that? How do you break that up into tiny bits? That damn speeding up continues. 10/30 6:16pm - We found a monster that could sweep all of us away. I think that's a mistake, but it feels a little bit huge, so I guess that's just how giant bugs of today behave. I bet we could take out the front lines and they'd just start raging harder and harder, until they finally barge right through. That's a hell of an idea. Or not. 10/30 6:14pm - We killed a giant bug, but we couldn't do anything about the swarm. I wish I'd done more that would've scared them off. The blob itself feels pretty badass. Like, kick giant insect's ass anyway. I'm cool with it

Coordination chemistry and properties of Au(NHC)(AuH) [NHC = N-heterocyclic carbene]. The syntheses, molecular structures, and properties of the first-row transition metal complexes containing the $[\text{Au}(\text{NHC})(\text{AuH})]^+$ cation [NHC = N-heterocyclic carbene] have been investigated. The carbene ligands, derived from diaza[n]indenaphthyl (1), quinolizino[4,5-b]quinolin-1-one (2), and 9-methyl-8-phenylcarbazole (3), were prepared by Au-catalyzed reactions in the presence of the respective monohydrocarbyl halides. The characterizations of the first $[\text{Au}(1)(\text{AuH})]^+$ and second $[\text{Au}(2)(\text{AuH})]^+$ complexes revealed that both species exist as tetrahedral monomers in the solid state. Photolysis of $\text{Au}(1)(\text{AuH})^+$ and $\text{Au}(2)(\text{AuH})^+$ in methanol yielded their corresponding $\text{Au}(3)(\text{AuH})^{2+}$ complexes that are EPR-silent. A kinetic study of the reaction between $[\text{Au}(1)(\text{AuH})]^+$ and $[\text{Au}(2)(\text{AuH})]^+$ suggested that their reactivity toward alkynes is nearly equal.

Q: When is the Geometric Global Rearrangement possible? While studying a simple exercise in KPP-exercise of the book of M. Angel and N. Benes, I could not understand the explanation behind the statement (section 3.3) that in "a simple case" (where R is a ray and Δ a fan), the geometric global rearrangement is possible if and only if there is a geodesic ray intersecting R . The statement is as follows: " For the case where R is a ray and Δ a fan, then the geometric global rearrangement is possible if and only if there is a geodesic ray intersecting R . " It seems quite obvious that in that case, the fan Δ is convex iff there is a geodesic ray A intersecting R . But I could not understand, how in the simple case
