Basic Image Manipulation Basic image editing usually consists of changing the background of a document to a solid color (or gradients, which are discussed in the "Adding Gradients" section later in this chapter) or adding a border around the edges (or only around some of the edges, for an easy-to-remove background). When editing the background or adding a background color, the top layer (that is, the layer that was last added to the active document, or the layer currently being edited) becomes the background of the entire image, and any layers that were added beneath it become part of the background. If a layer becomes the background, the layer is no longer able to be edited, and you cannot see the layer itself. To revert the background to a single layer, click the layer's eye icon in the Layers panel and select None. To add a border around the edge of a document, select the Border or Shadow/Grainy filter. Make the settings as detailed in Table 11-1.

Table 11-1: Border Filter Settings

Button	Description	Default
Border Width (px)	Width of the border	5
Border Color	Color used for the border	Black
Shadow Color	Color used for the shadow	White

Note: The Border Width setting applies only to the appearance of the border and not to the actual width, which is controlled by the

A rare case of meningitis due to necrotizing eosinophilic cytomucosis of the lung in a dog. An 18-month-old, castrated male, spayed, Shih tzu dog with severe thoracic dyspnoea and a prolonged fever of unknown origin was referred to the Small Animal Clinic, La Canne Veterinary Teaching Hospital, F-13000 Marseille, France. Clinical examination revealed lack of appetite and weakness; on auscultation, the heart and lung auscultation were normal. No abnormalities were found on complete blood count and biochemical analysis. Thoracic X-rays demonstrated an enlargement of the left cranial mediastinal window and a fine alveolar pattern. Thoracic CT-scan revealed diffuse lymphadenomegaly and a consolidation in the medial cranioventral lobar region. A diffuse and marked alveolar pattern of the lungs was observed on a thoracic CT-scan in an 18-month-old, castrated male, spayed, Shih tzu dog with respiratory signs and a prolonged fever of unknown origin.

Bronchoalveolar lavage and eosinophilic cytomucosis of the lung was diagnosed on cytology and histology respectively. Treatment was initiated with aspirin and ceftiofur with a complete clinical recovery. A phylogenetic study based on partial sequences of the 16S rRNA gene of the feline isolate identified the bacterium as a member of the Corynebacterium (C) xerosis group within the order Corynebacteriales. To our knowledge, this is the first report of the isolation of this rare
