The world is in a tizzy about this leaked ThinkPad W530, but the good folks over at Lenovo have confirmed that this thing is real. The W530 is an Ultrabook that is currently in development, according to the folks at Lenovo. The ThinkPad W530, like the Lenovo Yoga 2 Pro (one with a hybrid touchpad, the other with a touch screen) and the Lenovo ThinkPad X2 (tablet mode) will join the ThinkPad Yoga tablet and the ThinkPad Tablet 2 in this family. Let's look at the specs of the ThinkPad W530. It has a 13.3-inch IPS display with a resolution of 1600 x 900 and a G-Sync display backlight from AU Optronics. As for the processor, there's an Intel Celeron N2830 and not Intel Core i3 or i5. At least there aren't any socketed CPUs on the W530. The RAM is 4GB, and there's 32GB of solid-state NAND flash storage. The folks over at Lenovo say that the ThinkPad W530 will be released this year. We'll be sure to keep you updated with all the specs as we hear them, along with a launch time. Former Chicago Bears receiver Cliff Branch posted $2.5 million bail Thursday to make it to a court hearing for a fourth case in five months involving arrests for carrying a weapon and marijuana possession. "I'm going to see my kids and my ex-wife, and then I got to be in court," Branch said, laughing. "That's about it." He was arrested Wednesday on a weapons charge in the Chicago suburb of Melrose Park, about 15 miles northwest of Chicago. "Everything is going to be OK c6a93da74d
