Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a paper press machine, and, more particularly, to a paper press machine having an improved paper ejection apparatus and a paper ejection method. 2. Description of the Related Art A conventional web-fed rotary printing machine has been configured such that a bottom paper ejection mechanism includes a roll of paper, a deflection cam fixed to the shaft of the roll of paper, a longitudinally extending groove defined by the deflection cam, a pivotal lever rotatably attached to a shaft of a rotary printing machine, and a contact piece carried on the pivotal lever and abutting against the free end of the longitudinally extending groove to define paper ejection position for the roll of paper. Paper is removed at the paper ejection position to form paper ejection edges at the two sides of the paper. A paper ejection lever is rotatably mounted on a shaft of the rotary printing machine. The contact piece of the paper ejection mechanism is pushed by the paper ejection lever to pivotally move the pivotal lever. Then, the roll of paper is moved away from the rotary printing machine along a guide rod so as to form paper ejection edges on the paper. However, the paper ejection lever is mounted on the shaft of the rotary printing machine, so that the paper ejection lever cannot be moved away from the rotary printing machine if the paper is jammed. Thus, a failure may occur in a paper ejection operation. Further, the paper ejection lever rotates in an opposite direction to that of a paper ejection direction, which results in a waste of energy.
